About Audiologists and Speech-Language Pathologists

The ability to speak and hear is the basic essence of communication for mankind. Communication skills are in great demand in this millennium, be it through verbal, written or electronic media. Communication, which is acquired early in life, is the means by which human beings gain personal, social, emotional as well as professional satisfaction. Verbal communication is considered the most effective mode of communication. These skills develop and get refined with age. There are certain conditions which lead to disorders of communication. Speech-Language Pathologist and Audiologist handle these disorders along with other professionals. They have a significant role to alleviate and manage the impact of communication disorders.

The clients with communication disorders who are generally managed by Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists include those having hearing impairment, mental retardation, cerebral palsy, autism and other related disorders, voice disorders, phonological disorders, fluency disorders, learning disability, dysarthria and other neurological disorders, aphasia and other language disorders in children and adults and similar other conditions that affect communication skills in individuals. Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists offer services to the persons with communication disorder in a variety of setups such as hospitals, specialized institutions and schools, teaching and research organizations. Further, the Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists also work in liaison with other professionals in super specialty clinics and hospitals or with special educators in special schools.

The students study the core subjects of Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology in depth. They also study allied subjects such as Clinical Psychology, Linguistics, Electronics, ENT and other medical subjects related to Speech and Hearing. As a part of their clinical course work, they are guided to screen, identify and diagnose communication disorders in different age groups, ranging from new born babies to senior citizens as old as 100+ years. In order to do this they trained to use state-of-the-art techniques and subsequently offer management strategies and make appropriate referrals. In addition, they are taught to conduct research and document information for future reference. Opportunity and guidance are also provided to the students to participate in professional workshops, seminars and conferences for enhancing their knowledge-base and to stimulate the young minds for research. The challenges that are posed in this prestigious career are at different levels. Prevention of communication disorders is the first and foremost challenge for which the Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists are trained right from their entry into the course.

Those with a BASLP, M.Sc. (Aud) and M.Sc. (SLP), who are registered with the Rehabilitation Council of India, are considered as full-fledged professionals. They are licensed to do private practice on their own. Apart from this, the field of speech and hearing provides plenty of opportunities, both in India and abroad with attractive job prospects and a bright career. AIISH welcomes you to join the fraternity of Audiologists and Speech-Language Pathologists.

About Special Educators in the area of Hearing Impairment

Hearing impairment is a hidden handicap, the limitation of which is evident in every aspect of the development in a child. If these children are identified and rehabilitated early they are capable of adjusting to the expectations of the society. For these students to receive appropriate education, a variety of accommodations are required ranging from minor seating adjustments to the use of sophisticated equipment for facilitating learning. To do all this, teachers in a regular educational setup have to be equipped with accurate information about the nature and needs of Children with Hearing Impairment (CWHI) along with their special instructional needs. Teachers must also understand the psychosocial aspects of the disability. Children with hearing impairment have difficulty acquiring speech and language normally. This in turn affects their academic development. Different kinds of rehabilitation services of clinical, psychological and educational nature are to be made available to help them overcome the impact of the disability. In order to meet the massive needs in the country we have to train more number of personnel in the field of special education with multi-dimensional abilities.

A certificate and diploma course is offered that gives importance to the early stage of development of a child. The focus is on language acquisition and cognitive development. In the bachelor's course, the students study the core educational papers which provide basic information on the nature and needs of different disabilities, the psychological aspects of disabilities and trends in special education. The special papers include methods of teaching speech, language and school subjects to CWHI. The master's course has core papers for a strong base of teaching pedagogy along with specialization papers in the area of hearing impairment in addition to the input from the certificate and bachelors course. As a special feature all the courses have immense exposure to the wide variety of clinical setup existing in the institute as part of the practical training. This will enable them to participate more meaningfully in the activities of the Institute and contribute to promoting the quality of life of learners with hearing impairment.

The courses offered in special education will create a lot of professional opportunities for successful candidates. They can work in preparatory schools or can work as resource persons for CWHI and their caregivers. They will be eligible to work in both mainstream and special education setups. Besides this, they can also work as administrators in governmental and non-governmental educational programmes or become planners or policy makers who can make or change the face of special education in our society/the country. Candidates with a proactive inclination can become researchers who pioneer developments in the field of education for both children with and without disabilities. Finally, special educators will help children with hearing impairment to lead a better quality of life and to be a part of the society at large.

The Rehabilitation Council of India (RCI) registers candidates with a diploma, bachelor's and master's courses as full-fledged personnel / professionals in the area of special education of the hearing impaired. They are permitted to run early intervention centres and special schools. Apart from this, the field of special education provides plenty of opportunities for a bright career. The premier institute in the area of speech and hearing has already made a mark in the area of special education and you are welcome to join and help in this endeavour.

The Training Program

Classroom Teaching

The classroom teaching is carried out in the 'Academic Block' which houses a dozen well equipped classrooms, a 50-seater mini-seminar hall and a 180-seater air-conditioned seminar hall. The block is barrier free for candidates with disabilities. Separate space is provided for JRFs to carry out their research work smoothly. Each JRF is provided with a computer with internet connection.

The faculty of the institute make use of OHP and LCD projectors, dust-free writing boards (provided in each classroom) and demonstrations in direct teaching. Students are encouraged to carry out presentations of assignments at undergraduate and postgraduate levels. At the masters' level, the students are encouraged to do class presentations on different topics within the syllabus. As part of the training programs, students present clinical cases in the weekly Clinical Conferences (III BASLP/B.Sc. students) and journal articles in the weekly Journal Club (I M.Sc. /M.S.Ed. students). This is done to inculcate both clinical as well as research interests in students. The performance of students in Clinical Conference and Journal Club are evaluated and the best presenters are given awards at the end of the academic year.

Clinical Training

The Department of Clinical Services coordinates clinical programs for the training of graduate and post graduate students. It functions as a nodal centre in offering clinical services to individuals with communication disorders. It emphasizes a holistic and comprehensive approach to diagnostic and therapeutic services for all types of speech, language and hearing disorders. The department has visiting consultants in the areas of neurology, pediatrics, plastic surgery, prosthodontics and phonosurgery. Students participate in 'Speciality Clinics' to focus on specific disorders. The department receives clients from all over the country.

The department, housed in a spacious and modern complex is equipped with state-of-the-art technology to provide clinical training to students in tune with their classroom theoretical training. The students are trained in the assessment and management of communication disorders as well as in clinical documentation.

Diagnostic, therapeutic and counselling services are provided to the client with various communication disorders under the supervision of faculty members and also through high-tech Close Circuit TV networking.

Internship: Internees (4th year – BASLP) are posted to different Districts/States all over India for their training during their internship. The aim of the clinical internship program is to provide a chance for the students to work in different set ups such as school, community (rural and urban), hospital, and private clinics and to expose them to clinical population to which they may not have been exposed to at the institute.

Research

The research inclinations of students are nurtured and they are encouraged to prepare scientific papers/posters for presenting/publishing at national and international forums. Besides, students also take part and present scientific papers in various national and international conferences/seminars. Students of the institute took part in the 42nd Annual Conference of Indian Speech and Hearing Association held in January 2010 at Bangalore, Karnataka and won two awards. As part fulfilment of master's program, final year M.Sc. students carry out research and submit their dissertation by the end of the term. Students at all levels are encouraged to participate, present and publish scientific papers in various national and international scientific meets.
